The MARYLAND GAZETTE.

[XXI[st] Year.] THURSDAY, May 30, 1765. [N°. 1047.]

The following is ſaid to be a Copy of a LETTER, ſent by a plain Yeoman in New-England, to a certain Great Perſonage in Old-England.

MY LORD,

AT a Time when the reſpective Legiſlatures of Great-Britain, and of theſe his Majeſty's Dominions in America, are as wide apart in Sentiment of each one's Extent of Power in Point of Legiſlation, as they are Eaſt and Weſt of each other in Point of Situation; more eſpecially when we are not permitted to aſſert, or contend for, excluſive Rights from thoſe of our Fellow-Subjects on the other Side of the Atlantic, an Appeal to your Lordſhip from a plain American, who never was among the Great, in regard to parliamentary Reſolutions for Taxing us, and otherwiſe abridging ſuch Privileges as we have long enjoyed, and humbly conceive have a Right to, may be thought highly preſumptuous. However, the Character which your Lordſhip bears, of a Vindicator of all the juſt and eſtabliſhed Rights of the King's Subjects, emboldens me to addreſs you, in full Reliance, that ſo far as the Matters contained in the following Addreſs are founded on the known Principles of the Britiſh Government, and managed with Decency, they will find with your Lordſhip Candour and Countenance.

I am told from good Authority, that the Parliament would not permit any Petitions to be heard from the Colonies, claiming as a Right an Exemption from parliamentary Taxation. It is very hard, My Lord, that ſo large a Portion of the King's Subjects, as are contained in North-America, and who have ever been diſtinguiſhed for their Loyalty, cannot be heard on a Subject, in which they are ſo deeply intereſted. Can it come within Poſſibility, that all the Individuals in the Northern Colonies ſhould, without previous Conference, minutely concur in Sentiment, that the Britiſh Parliament cannot, agreeable with the inherent Privileges of the Coloniſts, Tax them without a Repreſentation on their Part, unleſs there was ſome Colour for ſuch Exemption? I have always been inſtructed, and perhaps truly, that to claim a Right was as well the Subjects Privilege, as to remonſtrate againſt any particular Grievance: And ſuppoſe, My Lord, that the Parliament of Great-Britain ſhould order a Tax to be aſſeſſed and levied on the real and perſonal Eſtate in Ireland, without any Reference to the Legiſlature of that Kingdom, or Repreſentation of the People there, could it be thought Preſumption, or a Project of Independence in that People, freely to remonſtrate againſt ſuch unconſtitutional Meaſures? The Northern Colonies fall but little ſhort in Numbers with Ireland; and of what Importance they are to the Crown, your Lordſhip is a fit Judge. Why then is it deemed near or quite criminal even to expoſtulate, when they univerſally look on the late Meaſures Reſolved on concerning them, as ſo many Privations of their juſt Rights as Freemen? Our Zeal for his Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and our Loyalty, have been always teſtified, and of late eſpecially, in a Manner ſo much for the national Advantage, and our own Honour, that we verily thought that every Right, which we had heretofore enjoyed, with the full Concurrence of the Britiſh Government, would have been amply ſecured to us; not to mention the Hopes we had conceived of ſuch further Privileges and Immunities, as the Tenderneſs of a maternal State ſhould dictate, for the Emolument of her dutiful Children. But to our infinite Regret and Diſappointment, we have not only been deprived in a great Meaſure of ſome of our ancient and invaluable Rights, but virtually forbid the Liberty even of complaining!

The Miniſtry have held forth, that a Plea on the Side of the Colonies, expreſſive of their Rights, and conteſting the Power of Parliament to Tax them without their own Agreement, is not to be endured, and looks like aiming at Independence. Miniſterial Threats too, if we are rightly informed, have been directed at us, to terrify us into a Compliance with ſuch new Regulations, as muſt operate to our Ruin. All the Colonies on the Continent, in their ſeveral Petitions and Remonſtrances, dutifully, though firmly, aſſert their Right of Excluſion from parliamentary Taxation, founded on the Principles of the Britiſh Government, and the Terms of their Colonization. The Parliament expreſſes Indignation at ſuch Pretenſions, and will not hear the Colonies on that Plea. If there be any Colour, My Lord, for a Claim of the Exemption in Queſtion, the whole World will judge, that the Parliament's Refuſal to hear the Colonies on that Point, muſt convince them what Reception they are to expect any future Applications for the Preſervation of their Liberties will meet with. Would not any Men, other than the conſtituent Members of the Commons Houſe, pay ſo much Deference to the Opinions of above a Million of loyal Subjects of the Crown, in a Matter of Right and Privilege, as to think that at leaſt there was Colour for their Pretenſions? The Dignity of ſo many Legiſlatives, compoſed of great and good Men, one would think ſhould have ſome Attraction upon the Virtue of the grand Legiſlative of the Nation, and operate in a Manner at leaſt to induce a Hearing. However dignified Men may be, they are not abſolved from their Obligations of doing right to the loweſt Subject, and conſulting the Security and Protection of all his righteous Claims. On the other Hand, ſhould thoſe in Rule and Power roughly diſmiſs him, who would lay his Grievances before them, and inſtead of alleviating his Burdens, ſhould increaſe them, becauſe he dared to expoſtulate, all indifferent Spectators of ſuch an uſe of Power would judge that it preſaged no good to the governed. Pharaoh, Caligula, and but a few more, have been Inſtances of ſuch Abuſers of Power, and thereby rendered themſelves ſo deteſtable to Mankind, that inſtead of Imitation, Rulers in general ſhudder at a bare Recital of their horrid Impieties. I do not mention thoſe Monſters with any Deſign of making an odious Parallel between them and any Perſons now in Authority, but only to colour high an ignominious Condition of Slavery, that ſo the State of free Engliſhmen, free Britons, may appear the more illuſtrious in Contraſt; and to ſhew that every little Infraction of their famed Privileges, whether caſual or deſigned, tends Conſequentially to the Introduction of Tyranny. If our Arguments are frivolous, it will be the eaſier to confute them; and moſt certainly among Brother Subjects a ſerious Refutation ought to be tried before a contemptuous Treatment, or a Diſcharge of Menaces.

But it is ſaid that ſuch Doctrine as we have embraced is dangerous, and looks like aiming at Independence. Theſe are very general Charges, and unleſs the Terms be defined with ſome Preciſion, we ſhall never know what Defences to make againſt them. If by dangerous be intended that we challenge Something contrary to the Fundamentals of the Britiſh Conſtitution, it will be begging the Queſtion: For we contend that unleſs our Claim be admitted, we ſhall be deprived of that, which by the Fundamentals of the Britiſh Conſtitution we ought to enjoy. And what Danger, My Lord, can reſult from a Diſcuſſion in Parliament of the Queſtion? As to the Words Dependence and Independence, I take it, that they are more uſed for their Sound, than for any Meaning which they can poſſibly bear, as applied to the Colonies. I could wiſh that ſome Civilian would ſettle how far the People of America are dependent on the People of Britain: I know of no Dependence or Relation, only, that we are all the common Subjects of the ſame King; and by any Thing that hath been ſaid in the preſent Controverſy, I cannot find that the Inhabitants of the Colonies are dependent on the People of Britain, or the People of Britain on them, any more than Kent is on Suſſex, or Suſſex on Kent. —If by aiming at Independence be meant, that the Colonies are about to ſhake off their Allegiance to the Crown, we utterly deny that ſuch Intentions ever entered into our Breaſts. Here I cannot paſs by in Silence the jealous and baſeleſs Suppoſition, formed on the other Side of the Water, that the Colonies want only a favourable Opportunity of ſetting up for themſelves. This Charge againſt us hath for many Years been kept a going in Britain, with ſuch Diligence and Management, that the Minds of the People there are almoſt univerſally imbittered againſt us; and the Prejudice, to repreſent the Colonies in Fact, hath taken it's Seat in the grand Legiſlative of the Nation, to our infinite Detriment; although nothing can be more fictitious than the Suggeſtion. We are eſteemed as Rivals and Enemies by a Country, who ought and might put the fureſt Confidence in us, and who have the greateſt Reaſon in the World to lend us their kind Aſſiſtance, and upon the leaſt Application for the Purpoſe to conſider and redreſs our Griefs. This Jealouſy towards us, although utterly Groundleſs, accounts for the unfavourable Light in which all our Conduct and Petitions are viewed, and ſo far hath a pernicious Effect.

But if by Independence be intended our Maintenance of Argument againſt the levying Taxes upon us without our own Conſent, then it is ſo far true that we do aim at Independence. Such Independence is the main Pillar of our happy Frame of Government, and hath ever been claimed and enjoyed, from the Times of the Saxons down to this Day, by our Fellow-Subjects in Britain, excepting when for ſhort Durations in tyrannous Times it was interrupted; and how it hath come to paſs that the Coloniſts, as Part of the King's natural Subjects, have forfeited ſuch ancient Privileges, always heretofore acknowledged to be the Birth-right of all the King's free Subjects without Diſtinction, hath not been yet told us. How then, My Lord, can it be deemed as aiming at Independence, in the worſt Senſe of the Words, i. e. an Effort to caſt off our Allegiance, for the Dominions in America to aſſert and claim that as a Right, which all the Reſt of the King's Subjects have ever claimed and enjoyed.

I muſt now beg your Lordſhip's Patience, whilſt I conſider a little two Objections, which have been made againſt the Matters of our Remonſtrances. One is Precedents, and the other is a round Aſſertion, that we are in Fact repreſented in Parliament.

As to the firſt, it is objected to us that the erecting a Poſt-Office in America is a Tax upon the People, and that we made no ſuch Plea, as the preſent One, when the Act of the 9th of Anne was made for the Eſtabliſhment of that Office here. In Anſwer to which let it be obſerved, that ſuch an Inſtitution, if not made too Expenſive, is ſo manifeſtly for the Convenience of a Country, that it is not to be wondered at that the Coloniſts put up with an undeſigned bordering too cloſe upon a meer Right, which might ariſe from want of due Attention to it, when inſtead of evil Conſequences, there ſprung a general Convenience. It is well known by all, who are but a little verſed in Hiſtory, by what ſilent and almoſt imperceptible Degrees the Liberties of Subjects may be encroached upon, and how much they will endure before they will make any general Complaint; and it is unfair to cite as a Precedent our Submiſſion to an unconſtitutional Proceeding, although then unattended with any evil Conſequences. But it is now apparent that that Meaſure, by only being brought into Example, hath been of dangerous Conſequence; and very likely the Colony of South-Carolina, who, I am told, would never permit the Poſtmaſter-General to exerciſe any Authority there, foreſaw the evil Tendency of ſuch a Precedent. Mr. Locke ſuppoſes that abſolute Monarchy would be the beſt Form of Government, if the Monarch was always a wiſe and good Man; but yet I very much doubt if ſuch Doctrine, ſuppoſing it to be true, could juſtify the Legiſlative in a Departure from the eſtabliſhed Principles of the Conſtitution, even upon a Suppoſition that ſuch unconſtitutional Proceedings appeared ſalutary and good for the governed: For the very Example would be a Proof that the Laws of the Country were no Security to the Subject, and might be got over, when it ſhould be thought convenient. But here with Reſpect to the Statute of the 9th of Anne, let it be conſidered that the Colonies on the Continent are ſo diſtinct from each other, and ſo different in their Situation, Intereſt and Modes of Government, that it would have been next to impoſſible for them to have ever eſtabliſhed regular Poſts through their ſeveral extenſive Juriſdictions, for want of a Concurrence of Council; and therefore it became Needful for that Matter to be regulated by ſome Power ſuperior to all the Colonies;

but with Submiſſion to your Lordſhip's better Judgment, I think, from the Nature of our territorial Rights ſuch a Regulation might have come with much more Propriety from the King, who is ſupreme Lord of theſe Dominions, than from the Parliament, and then the Concurrence of the Colonies would have been of Courſe given thereto.

[The Remainder to be in our next.]

THE Subſcribers beg Leave to inform the PUBLIC, That they have lately Erected, at BALTIMORE-TOWN, in MARYLAND, A DISTILLERY for making RUM; which, (by many good Judges who have ſeen it) is allowed to be one of the largeſt, compleateſt and beſt conſtructed STILL-HOUSE of any in NORTH-AMERICA: And having furniſhed themſelves with an expert DISTILLER, and a plentiful Stock of MOLASSES, they purpoſe to carry on the DISTILLING BUSINESS extenſively, and to ſupply conſtantly the Demand for Home-made RUM, at nearly the ſame as the Philadelphia Prices, at leaſt on much lower Terms than the Province of MARYLAND has been generally ſupplied with that Article. The RUM already made by them has been highly approved by the beſt Judges, and deemed ſuperior to either Philadelphia or New-England RUM; and they hope to give Satisfaction to the Public, as well as maintain their own Reputation, by continuing to make always of the ſame approved Quality.

As this Undertaking is ſo well calculated to promote the general Trade of the Province, and ſo convenient for ſupplying the Country Traders, Farmers, &c. who bring their Produce to Baltimore Market, as well as to promote the private Emolument of the Owners; it is hoped the Public will give proper Encouragement to a Branch of Trade ſo uſeful, and ſo much wanted in the Province.

Any Gentlemen wanting Quantities of RUM for Exportation, by giving timeous Notice may be ſupplied, and proper Allowance made to ſuch, by Their humble Servants,
